Brief Report:

To improve students' Economics performance, the faculty decided to provide remedial classes on Macroeconomics and Statistics. Students who needed assistance were identified based on their previous test results. Prof. Som Negi taught statistical methods and Dr. Shashi taught macroeconomics to students who were struggling to understand complicated concepts in these areas and wanted to improve their performance. The faculty used both lecture-based instruction and interactive problem-solving exercises. Approximately 80% of the identified students attended each session, indicating a strong turnout. Students actively participated in classroom discussions and asked questions.
